

Event Crew & Dungeon Monitors Guide

What should the event organiser be telling me?

- The location of toilets, changing spaces, refreshments, etc
- Dungeon entry points and barriers for safety.
- Where the cleaning kit is kept e.g. spare tissues, mops etc
- Who is responsible and what is the procedure for first aid incidents.
- Who is responsible and what is the procedure for security issues.
- Guidance on what the event rules and codes of conduct are.
- Guidance on how to approach and report people who are violating event rules and codes of conduct

What do I look out for as a Dungeon Monitor?

- Players setting up and using the equipment incorrectly
- People walking unsafely around the dungeon space
- Noisy people not in scenes causing distractions for other players
- Drunk or drugged up people playing or in the dungeon area
- Medical issues occurring such as fainting, shock or fits
- Signs of aggressive behaviour
- Harassment of people occurring
- Non-consensual involvement or touching by people not in that scene
- Lack of enthusiastic consent from participants
- Play that appears to be non-consensual that the DM was not notified of in advance
- People in rope or other bondage that have been left unattended
- Medical play being carried out in areas where it is prohibited
- Extreme / heavy play that the DM was not notified of in advance and is out of context for the event
- Someone calling RED and being ignored (assuming RED is the event safe word)
- If danger to life, limbs or property has, or is likely to happen.
- Other protocols for your event that are not being followed

What kind of things might I be doing?

- Helping set up the venue before the event.
- Wearing identification to show you are a volunteer
- Showing attendees around the venue.
- Sharing health and safety related information such as smoking areas and fire exits.
- Providing guidance on the event rules and codes of conduct.
- Stopping and reporting any situation where danger to life, limb or property has, or is likely to happen.
- Helping with any first aid situations that occur.
- Helping with any security situations that occur.
- Cleaning the venue during and after the event.

THESE ARE GENERIC
GUIDELINES ONLY.
SPEAK TO YOUR EVENT
ORGANISER FOR MORE
SPECIFIC INFORMATION.

SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS

The venue & the event organiser should have information about how to contact the local sexual assault and rape clinic aka SARC if needed. They can provide a variety of services including:

- forensic medical examinations
- contraception
- sexual violence advisors
- counselling
